

GREAT BRITAIN WRESTLES WITH THE MOST CRITICAL FINANCIAL SITUATION FACED SINCE TIME OF THE WORLD WAR

Prime Minister MacDonald Hastily Convenes Cabinet Meeting—Decision Reached to Suspend Gold Redemption Act of 1925—Help to Halt Alarming Withdrawals

London, Sept. 21.—Suspending the gold standard, raising the Bank of England discount rate to six per cent. and closing all stock exchanges, Great Britain wrestled today with the most critical financial situation since the World War.

Brought back from his country home at Chequers by the Prince of Wales, Prime Minister MacDonald hastily convened a Cabinet meeting last night and it was decided that the gold redemption act of 1925 should be suspended to halt alarming withdrawals of gold by foreign investors.

Parliament is expected to pass the enabling legislation tonight, after which it will go to King George in Scotland for his approval.

The bank rate was raised from four and one-half per cent., a figure which was set in July. It has not been up to six per cent. since October 31, 1929. The highest it has been since the war was seven per cent. and the highest during the war period was ten per cent., set two days before the declaration of hostilities on August 3, 1914.

After the Cabinet meeting, a statement was issued from 10 Downing Street, as follows:

"His Majesty's Government has decided after consultation with the Bank of England that it has become necessary to suspend, for the time being, operation of the sub-section of the Gold Standard Act of 1925 which required the bank to sell gold at a fixed price.

"A bill for this purpose will be introduced immediately and it is the intention of His Majesty's Government to ask Parliament to pass it through all its stages on Monday, the twenty-first of September. In the meantime, the Bank of England has been authorized to proceed accordingly in anticipation of the action of Parliament.

"The reasons which led to this decision are as follows:

"Since the middle of July, funds amounting to more than £200,000,000 (approximately $1,000,000,000) have been withdrawn from the London market. The withdrawals have been met partly from the gold and foreign currency held by the Bank of England, partly from proceeds of a credit of £50,000,000 ($250,000,000) which shortly matures, secured by the Bank of England from New York and Paris, and partly from proceeds of French and American credits amounting to £80,000,000 ($400,000,000) recently obtained by the Government.

"During the last few days, withdrawals of foreign balances have accelerated so sharply that His Majesty's Government felt it was bound to take the decision mentioned above.

"This decision will, of course, not affect obligations of His Majesty's Government or of the Bank of England which are payable in foreign currencies.

"Gold holdings of the Bank of England amount to some £130,000,000 ($650,000,000) and, having regard to contingencies which may have to be met, it is inadvisable to allow this reserve to be further reduced.

"There will be no interruption of ordinary banking business. Banks will be open as usual for the contingencies which may have to be met, it is inadvisable to allow this reserve to be further reduced.

"There will be no interruption of ordinary banking business. Banks will be open as usual for the contingencies which may have to be met, it is inadvisable to allow this reserve to be further reduced.

"It has been arranged that the Stock Exchange shall not be opened on Monday, the day on which Parliament is passing necessary legislation. This will not, however, interfere with business or the current settlement on the Stock Exchange, which will be carried on as usual.

"His Majesty's Government have no reason to believe that the present difficulties are due to any substantial extent to the export of capital by British nationals. Undoubtedly the bulk of withdrawals has been for foreign accounts.

"They desire, however, to repeat emphatically the warning given by the Chancellor of the Exchequer that any British citizen who increases the strain on exchanges by purchasing foreign securities himself or assists others to do so is deliberately adding to the country's difficulties."

"The banks have undertaken to co-operate in restricting the purchase by British citizens of foreign exchanges except those required for actual needs of trade or for meeting existing contracts and should further measures prove to be advisable his Majesty's Government will not hesitate to take them.

"His Majesty's Government have greeted at their decision with the greatest reluctance. But during the last ten days the international (Continued on Page 6)

Where Chinese-Japs Are at War

The latest theatre of war finds its apex at the ancient capital city of Manchuria, Mukden, which has been taken by force and is held by Japanese troops. Warfare between China and Japan in Manchuria, long a sore spot, flamed forth over dynamiting of a bridge on the Chinese Eastern Railway, an attack on Japanese railway guards, for both of which outrages Chinese soldiers are blamed, and the execution by China of a Japanese officer as a spy. In addition to the assault on Mukden, another Japanese force landed at Tsingtao on the south coast of the Shantung peninsula. Photo shows Nippon troops marching into Mukden through the great gate of the city on a previous clash with China. Map depicts the area of fighting. Colonel and Mrs. Charles B. Lindbergh, in landing at Nanking, are more than five hundred miles from the scene of military operations.

HOOVER'S SPEECH TODAY ANXIOUSLY AWAITED

Contents Carefully Guarded Until Just Before Delivery to Legionnaires Group

BROADCAST ARRANGED

By George E. Durno (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL ENROUTE TO DETROIT, Sept. 21.—Herbert Hoover, from all indications, was preparing to deliver the most momentous public address of his career today at noon before the annual convention of the American Legion in Detroit.

Although the contents of his speech have been so carefully guarded "they will not be available to anyone until just before he delivers it, there was strong reason to believe his utterances will have world-wide repercussions.

Surface indications were that the President would offer some new financial or economic proposal to stricken Europe which would equal, if not eclipse, his successful bid for a one-year moratorium on international debts and reparations. Prior to his appearance before the Legionnaires, there was no confirmation of this.

The unprecedented secrecy in which the text of the speech was withheld from the press—pointing to possible effect on the stock market—was one item inspiring this belief.

This morning's announcement that Great Britain temporarily had suspended the gold standard strengthened it—particularly inasmuch as the English stock market closes for the day while the British public assimilate this latest drastic move to meet the world crisis, and whatever Mr. Hoover may have to offer will come in the midst of the day's idle trading.

As the train neared Detroit, it became more and more possible the President would step to the rostrum atop before the Legionnaires without having let anyone outside his secretariat see the speech in advance. When first announcement came of Mr. Hoover's decision to appear at the veterans' convention, the consensus was unanimous he had decided to lead in person the Administration's fight against immediate payment of the reparation (Continued on Page 6)

PLAN AERIAL SURVEY OF PENNA. GAS FIELDS

Will Assist in Preparing Accurate Property and Base Map of Section

OTHER STATE NEWS

WELLSBORO, Pa., Sept. 21.—An aerial survey of the northern Pennsylvania natural gas fields will be made, the Lycoming Natural Gas Corporation announced here, to prepare an accurate property and base map of the natural gas section for use in leasing and other operations.

Based on photographs taken from a twenty thousand foot altitude and a ground control survey in the form of primary traverse and triangulation, the survey is expected to show cultural as well as property information.

Final maps of the region, according to officials, will equal government surveys in accuracy and farmers of the region are expected to derive benefit from the exposition of geographical and geologic formations. The survey will include Tioga, Potter, Bradford and parts of Susquehanna, Wyoming, Sullivan and Lycoming counties.

CHESTER, Pa., Sept. 21.—(INS)—If chickens could talk, probably the chief topic for conversation by "Snowball," pet white chicken owned by James Welsh here, would be that general favorite—"my operation."

"Snowball" is probably one of the few chickens, in or out of captivity, that can boast of an honest-to-goodness, genuine operation with a scar and all that goes with it.

Evidence of the operation is a scar on the crown of the chicken, testifying to the surgical ability of its owner. For the operation saved the chicken's life.

It seems "Snowball" led a charmed life from the day of hatching.

It was one of a brood of six and the only survivor of the half dozen. Attracting notice by its color, the fowl was adopted as a household pet and given the run of the Welsh menagerie.

Then "Snowball" fell ill of a strange malady. Its feathers began to droop and fall and fears were felt for its life. Members of the family were determined to save its life, if possible, and Welsh, examining the fowl's crown and finding it hard and swollen decided to operate.

With two sons assisting, Welsh made an incision and found in the crown a handful of Japanese beetles—source of the illness.

The operation pronounced a success, the incision was closed with an ordinary sewing needle and white thread. "Snowball" was placed in a special coop to recuperate and given special convalescent care.

Within a few days the convalescence was over and "Snowball" today is as "well as ever."

LANCASTER, Pa., Sept. 21.—(INS)—Justice has been partially restored to the Lancaster county court house.

This is no reflection on the Lancaster county bench. The Justice referred to is the lady with the sword and scales and this is to record that she has been rescued from complete oblivion and her head given a place of honor in the courthouse.

The figure of Justice was carved in wood above the dome when the building was erected in 1853. There she stood until the beginning of the present century when the courthouse was remodelled and Justice disappeared from the dome.

WEEK-END ENJOYED AT CAMP BUCCOU BY SCOUTS

Twenty-Seven from Here Spend Delightful Time In the Hills

REV. KNOWLTON VISITS

Twenty-seven Scouts, five leaders and one visitor spent a happy week-end at Camp Buccou under the direction of Troop Commissioners David Neill, Bristol, and Herbert Brambley, of Newportville. Due to the courtesy of C. S. Wetherill, of Bristol, a truck was secured to take the boys for a week-end of Scouting and outing at the local Boy Scout Camp, Thos. A. Collier, local dealer, made it possible for Sea Scout John Ellis to drive the truck.

Saturday evening each camper prepared his own meal on the hillside. The evening meal was over and each of the many small cooking fires were extinguished just as darkness crept over the camp site. The troop committee chairman, Herbert Pettit, of Bristol Troop No. 1, arrived in camp just as the boys had cleaned up after their meal. Mr. Pettit brought with him Troop Committeeman Norman "Zip" Hetherington, also of Bristol No. 1.

Before a cheery fireside, Troop Commissioner Herbert Brambley entertained the group with a novel method of story telling. The art of story telling has long been one of Mr. Brambley's choice and needless to say the boys enjoyed the time spent that night before "Herb" and the Good Times Hall fireplace. Shortly after the conclusion of the campfire taps was sounded and as its echoes died among the hills the boys tucked themselves away for the adventures that awaited them on the morrow.

Despite the local showers experienced in Bristol on Sunday there was no rain at Buccou to interrupt the Sunday program. Scout George Talbot, of Troop 5, sounded reveille at 7. Troop Commissioner Neill conducted a hike after a free time period after which the boys enjoyed a dip in the refreshing waters of the Raritan.

Sunday afternoon after the noon-day meal Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Bristol, visited the camp together with Thomas Shelton, of Bristol. Services were then held in the out-of-door woods chapel, by Rev. Knowlton. Mr. Shelton assisted by leading the boys in the singing of hymns.

After a thorough policing and straightening of the camp site and buildings the boys and leaders left camp for Bristol and Newportville after a very enjoyable camping experience. No doubt all are looking forward to their next opportunity to spend a week-end camping at Buccou. The following are the names of those Scouts who were at Buccou: Troop (Continued on Page 6)

Criminal Court Opens; Fourteen Bills Ignored

September term of criminal court gets under way at Doylestown today. Fourteen bills were ignored by the Grand Jury last week in criminal court, a number of them being cases of alleged drunken drivers who were not examined by physicians after being arrested. Forty-three were returned true bills out of the fifty-seven before the Grand Jury.

After completing the court work the Grand Jury inspected the public buildings and submitted the report to Judge Hiram H. Keller and Calvin S. Boyer. The foreman of the Grand Jury was L. Creighton Vandegriff, of Eddington.

In the written report the Grand Jury submitted, it was recommended that the present Court House either be enlarged or that alterations be made as quickly as possible so that the congestion in the various offices can be relieved. Particular mention was made of the congestion in the offices of the Recorder of Deeds and the Sheriff, Clerk of Quarter Sessions and the County Treasurer.

A visit was made to the County Prison where everything was found to be in excellent condition. The jury also approved plans for two new bridges.

DIET AND MENTALITY

A scientist, admitting that the average female brain is not quite as human as that of the male, assures the ladies the only reason is that through the ages they have done less thinking than their mates. More than that, he promises them equality with the mentally stronger sex if they will devote the next thousand years to intensive thought.

But studies completed by the Yale Laboratories of physiologic chemistry and of psychology offer the girls a quicker way to mental equality. The studies, to be sure, were made on rats; and the professors do not say that what is true of rats is true of girls. But, after all, of what good is scientific research if a layman may not play with its implications?

The Yale professors studied the effect of stunting on behavior in white rats. They divided otherwise similar rats into three groups, and put two of the groups on a rigorous stunting diet. Then they tried their rats out on a maze which led to good rat food. In every case the normally fat rats were slower at learning the intricate route to food than the dieted ones; and when they were set at a new problem, with a different maze, the stunted animals again showed greater speed. When they were returned to a normal rat diet, and regained their normal weight, the difference in "intelligence" disappeared.

That what is true of white mice may not be true of human beings is indicated by wartime studies which disclosed that the mental efficiency of the German soldiers diminished as their rations were reduced. But let not feminists be discouraged by this. Is there not a world of evidence that many of the world's greatest works of art were conceived and created on an empty stomach?

THEY HAD TO BE GOOD

Housewives are strongly represented in the American Home Economics Association, which has been admitted to the standards council of the American Standards Association. The latter association consists of 38 engineering societies.

This recognition of the American Home Economics Association means the scientists have finally admitted the existence of such a thing as "kitchen engineering." Out of this recognition should come much of interest and use to the housewife.

"Kitchen engineering" constitutes one of the greatest industries of the world, for more women are occupied daily with household tasks than there are men and women working in the factories of the United States.

At the outset in this new order of things serious students, who know how to think scientifically, are considering the right height of kitchen stoves and sinks and the relation of tables, cupboards and cooking utensils as placed in the housewife's workshop to the number of steps she must take in preparing a meal and completing the routine of her job. Results will make for greater contentment in millions of homes.

Problems tend to solve themselves. And a few days after the next war begins the fliers will see that the battleships are junked.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

COPYRIGHT BY COVIEL, FRIEDE, INC. — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

THE tall, dark-eyed, hard-featured woman who had admitted us returned hurriedly and seemed to whisk the old woman bodily from our sight. As I turned and looked my astonishment at Thatcher Colt, he put his finger to his mouth, and walked across to another water-color, admiring it in low tones.

It was only a few minutes later that Felise Morgan entered the room.

The mistress of the apartment looked even more beautiful than when I had seen her, wrapped in furs, in the Police Commissioner's car. Now I saw that she was tall and slender, her figure exquisitely proportioned, and her coils of dark-red hair were wound around a pale and fragile face, characterized by refinement, taste and delicacy. The graceful curve of her scimitar brows arched above dark-green eyes of lustrous and almost chatoyant vitality and eagerness. As she approached us, coming from the drawing-room, she looked ethereal and lovely in a soft lavender negligee, her two hands clasped at her throat, and her eyes already studying us, as if sensing already that we were antagonistic, here to pry into the most secret chapters of her life.

An Unpleasant Duty.

The Police Commissioner rose and bowed profoundly.

"Mrs. Morgan," he said, "I came here on a most unpleasant duty."

"So the police have found out about Humphrey and me at last," she said with a sigh. Sinking into a small, wooden chair, she added: "I intended going to you. I could have saved you the trouble of tracing me. I was resolved to do so, no matter what the cost."

A smile, implying some kind of unspoken satisfaction, flitted across the mouth of Thatcher Colt.

"Hasn't the doctor forbidden you to speak?" he inquired.

"Who told you that?"

Thatcher Colt held up a protesting hand.

"Don't be under any misapprehensions," he said. "Doctor Maskell does not know I am here. He has no idea even that his relation to you is discovered. Only by keeping that fact quiet have I any hope of saving him."

"Saving him?" echoed Felise Morgan, slowly rising. "Why, you are the man who wants to kill him."

Thatcher Colt looked at her frankly.

"I am the man who gathered all the evidence on which the indictment was brought," he corrected. "But I have never believed him guilty. The District Attorney took the matter out of my hands and has gone ahead on his own course. Since the indictment, I have been seeking you. I want to arrest the right person."

She closed her eyes, and I could see that she was making a strong effort not to give way to her feelings.

"Why did you not go to Doctor Maskell about this?" she asked.

"He wouldn't trust me. Besides, I would give my hand away. Have we much time to talk?"

"I am afraid not. My husband—"

"Very well, then, I shall be quick. Did you or did you not receive a letter from Geraldine Foster shortly before she died?"

The pallor that suddenly swept across the beautiful face was a distressing thing to see. Stark terror came bounding to her eyes, looking out like a maddened and imprisoned animal. Thatcher Colt did not wait for her to answer.

"It demanded blackmail?"

"Yes."

"Have you the letter?"

"No—I destroyed it."

"Did you tell the doctor?"

"Yes."

"What did he say?"

"He was very, very angry."

"And ever since then, Mrs. Morgan, you have been afraid. And when her body was found, you believed—"

"No! No! I didn't believe it. I don't believe it now. Doctor Maskell was not capable of such a crime."

Thatcher Colt nodded.

"I believe you," he said. "Now, on the afternoon of Christmas Eve, did the doctor telephone you?"

"Yes. He said he had a message, apparently from me, to meet me at the house on Peddler's Road. He telephoned to confirm it. I told him about the letter. We both saw at once there was something wrong, and I promised to meet him at once at an art gallery—Wilkinson's—nearby. But I was prevented from leaving the house."

"Prevented—by what?"

"By my husband," she answered, looking at the Commissioner with level gaze.

Delving Deep.

"You never did see Doctor Maskell in the Wilkinson Galleries, then—all that afternoon?"

"No."

"Didn't you get in touch with him at all?"

"Didn't you fear he would worry?"

"No. It often happens that I am prevented from leaving the house. The doctor understands about that."

Thatcher Colt stood up and took

"Right! Now tell me—whom else did you mean to take with you?"

"His mother," she murmured.

"A poor old woman with no one—"

She got no further but halted, all her body trembling. We heard the sound of a key turning in the lock, and heavy footfalls after the slam of the door. Down the hallway strode the man that Thatcher Colt had pointed out to me in the street, the one Checkles had followed. At nearer view, and with his hat off, I saw what an unpossessing fellow was this Gilbert Morgan. He was spherical and plump, with jowels that hung down in ruddy keeches of flesh. His shiny bald head was like a cupola, a hemispherical roof over his head. Through his pudgy, little black eyes he looked at us malevolently.

"Felise, who are these men?" he asked in unctuous tones.

She hesitated, but before she could speak, Thatcher Colt had interceded.

"I am Thatcher Colt, the Police Commissioner of the City of New York," he suavely explained.

Was it fear that leaped in a scarlet dash across the face of the fat little man with the bold head? Or was it suspicion?

"The Police Commissioner?" he repeated, moistening his lips. "To what—"

With a gasp, Felise Morgan stood up, her eyes tragic.

a hurried turn around the room. I noticed that this hurried walk carried him past two doors of the room in which we sat, and that he observed them closely. Then he came closer to Felise Morgan and bending over her, asked in a low voice:

"You are sincerely in love with Maskell?"

"I am."

"Would you divorce your husband and marry the doctor if you could?"

"Gladly."

"Why haven't you done it, then?"

With a gasp, Felise Morgan stood up, her eyes tragic.

"You don't know all, then?"

"No, indeed, I do not."

"The doctor went to Reno—"

"We had both planned to go. He was to make arrangements. I was to follow with my little girls and also—"

Felise paused.

"I know," said Thatcher Colt, "that your husband has been a drug-fend for years. I know the difficulties on both sides that you and Maskell have faced. I can understand your secret meeting place on Peddler's Road. But why have you waited so long?"

"It takes time to make up the mind in cases like this."

"I shall tell you," interrupted Colt with a debonair smile. "It is a very difficult matter. The police have received complaints against this apartment. Of screams, high quarrels—"

A Quick Thinker.

"Preposterous!" grated the husband of Felise Morgan.

"I felt so," agreed Thatcher Colt. "I know perfectly well a man of your position would not make scenes, or create disturbances. However, I could not ignore the matter. And I did not want to offend an important man like yourself. So I came in person. Mrs. Morgan has already assured me it must be a malicious practical joke."

Good-day, Mrs. Morgan. And we left the apartment, without another word being spoken. It was not until we were again in the Commissioner's car, on our way back to Headquarters, that Thatcher Colt spoke:

"How did a fine woman like that ever marry such a creature?"

And then, after a moment's pause, he added:

"Why should Humphrey Maskell want to kill Geraldine Foster? If he wanted to kill anybody there was a ready-made victim for him right at hand in the person of his beloved's husband."

THIS NEWS IS VITAL

For the very first time
Bond Bread now brings you sunshine vitamin-D
VITAL to sound even teeth, straight strong bones, and
HAPPIER HEALTH

If your child went naked in the noonday sun, any kind of bread might do.

NEVER before offered in sufficient quantity by any table-food—this scarcest of the health-guarding elements, vitamin-D, can now be had at everybody's table—in Bond Bread.

All the other vitamins are plentiful in almost any well-balanced meal.

But until now, enough sunshine vitamin-D could be obtained only from direct sunshine, from sun-lamps and from medicines.

EVERYBODY—ESPECIALLY CHILDREN

Everyone is better off with a steady and ample supply of sunshine vitamin-D every day. This is particularly true of children—to maintain health, promote proper growth, to strengthen resistance to colds and illness, and to build strong bones and sound even teeth.

So a new way had to be found to bring the extra vitamin-D we all need.

NOW—IN YOUR DAILY BOND BREAD

Now science has found the way to put this scarcest of vital health-building food elements into bread. And your own delicious, favorite Bond Bread has been chosen exclusively to offer this priceless improvement.

Just one to two slices each meal will give you all the extra sunshine vitamin-D you need.

SAME DELICIOUS FLAVOR

Your grocer has vitamin-D Bond Bread—the same delicious flavor, the same firm, home-like texture that "Flavor-Peak" Rising insures—the bread that more than a million housewives buy every day. And even with this priceless improvement, it costs you no more than you formerly paid.

Don't Fool Yourself!

It won't be long now!

Old Jack Frost soon will be nipping the pumpkins and painting the leaves.

He will make a lot of pretty pictures, but the old boy also will make you think of the coal bin, galoshes, that hole in the roof and warm clothes for the kids.

If you have saved some money through the summer everything is O. K.

But if you haven't—and not many have been so lucky this year—you will decide that the big word in your lexicon is ECONOMY.

We will help you get through the fall and winter at less expense than will be incurred if you keep on running your private car.

It's nice to have a car—of course!—but it's expensive.

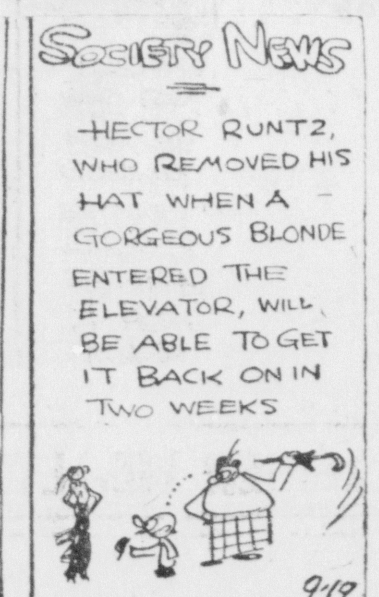

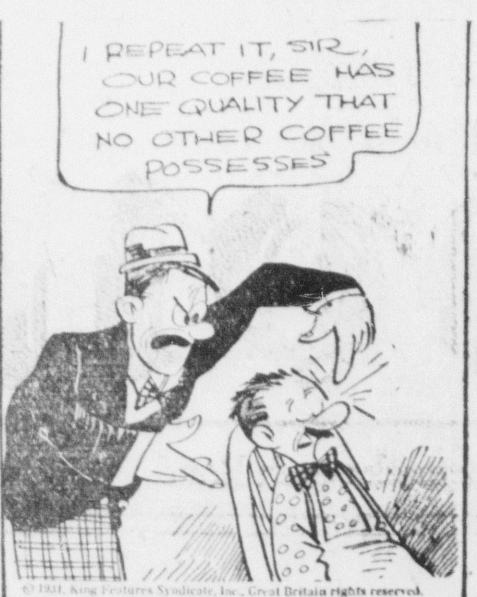

Why not decide now to use our buses and trolleys when you must make local journeys? They will carry you wherever you are going, wherever your children may be going, too, for a fraction of what it will cost you to run the private car.

Give this your serious thought. The difference between the fare on the buses and trolleys and the cost of running your own car may go a long way to provide the family with necessities. The private car is a luxury, whether you think so or not. Get out a piece of paper and a pencil and start figuring up what your car costs you per mile — you'll be surprised. And, if you're wise, you'll start today to make the buses and trolleys your economical transportation service.

FRILLS AND RUFFLES GIVE AN OLDEN-DAY LOOK TO COSTUMES

Ostrich Feathers and Chenille Used As Trimming On Evening Gowns

By Alice Langellier

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Sept. 21.—Frills and ruffles are furnishing old-fashioned trimming for the new-old frocks this season.

Evening gowns with ruffled skirts in black net or lace have a new delightful transparency allowing pretty ankles to be glimpsed through somere folds and thus affording pleasant consolation to the many opponents (masculine, of course) to the growing-longer skirts. Ostrich feathers and chenille are both used as trimmings on these. Maroon gowns have skirts with curved flounces over the hips which fall into a bustle effect at the back.

The very new Mrs. Clarence Mackey, formerly Anna Case, now honeymooning in the French capital, has been seen wearing Worth's gaily faillie evening gown with draped bodice and circular ruffles on the lower skirt.

Loisehoullanger make a charming evening gown in black satin with rows of frilling on the skirt, placed very low in order to avoid creasing when one sits down.

A Victorian gown in black crepe satin has row after row of frilly trimming on the skirt and bodice and a whitefitted yoke of fish-colored satin round the shoulders gives the necessary décolleté effect.

Another striking creation is a rich black velvet evening coat trimmed with wide black satin flounces. The collar is of ermine and the elbow-length sleeves trimmed with satin ruffles as well.

BIRTHDAY SUPPER

On Thursday evening a family supper was tendered Harry Goslin, of 225 Market street, in honor of his birthday anniversary. MRS. GRIFFIN RETAINS TITLE AT LANGHORNE

LANGHORNE, Sept. 21.—Mrs. Edward Griffin, this borough, successfully defended her women's golf championship at the Bucks County Country Club by defeating her foremost rival, Helen O'Connor, of Trenton, 3 up and 1 to play over the 18-hole route.

Mrs. Griffin and Miss O'Connor are now tied for possession of the Board of Governors trophy, which must be won three times for permanent ownership. Miss O'Connor won the title in 1928 and 1929, while Mrs. Griffin dethroned her last season.

Miss O'Connor's putting touch was missing and literally put away her chances for victory. By winning the short seventh a par three hole, with a five, Mrs. Griffin went one up on the first nine. Both had a medal score of 49 at the turn.

Mrs. Griffin captured the tenth with a par three, but Miss O'Connor squared the match by winning the eleventh and twelfth holes. She lost the thirteenth, however, and went two down on the next as Mrs. Griffin fired a par three. The fifteenth and sixteenth greens were halved and the defending champion settled the issue on the seventeenth with a par four after Miss O'Connor had fooled an approach shot.

Mrs. Griffin's driving was good and her all-around game was a trifle steadier than the challenger's, who alternately flashed brilliant and mediocre shooting.

LANGHORNE GRID TEAM PREPARES FOR SEASON

LANGHORNE, Sept. 21.—Practice for the coming football season at the Langhorne High School is well under way. A large squad has reported for practice, including several regulars from last year. Lorenz Davis and George Adams, last year's sensational players will be available. Adams will no doubt have his best year, as he tips the scale at 195 pounds and is a smashing back. His play against Newtown last Thanksgiving Day, when he scored two touchdowns, was above the average.

The punting and passing of Davis will be a great asset to the team. John Banks, half-back, will also be in the backfield.

David Paul, last year's regular center, and Tim Harrison, end, will be at their old positions. Both are fast and experienced. The other line positions will be filled by Brinton Johnson, Wardell Stackhouse, Jack Christine, Frank Stradling, Jesse Dougherty, Edward Black, William Paul, Herman Hermanson, William Forbes and William Claiss.

Coach Beck is pleased with the turnout of sophomore and freshman candidates.

A tackling dummy has been purchased and is being installed to help in tackling practice.

The season opens with Yardley on the home field on Sept. 25, at 3:45 p. m. The other home games are with Perkasio, Bristol and Olney High School.

The schedule follows:
Sept. 25, Yardley, home.
Oct. 3, Quakertown, away.
Oct. 9, Bristol, home.
Oct. 16, Bensalem, away.
Oct. 23, Perkasio, home.
Oct. 30, Olney High, home.
Nov. 6, Morrisville, away.
Nov. 13, Institute.
Nov. 20, Fallsington, away.

Hoover's Speech Today Anxiously Awaited

maining of the World War bonus. Treasury and veterans' bureau figures have been prepared to show this would cost the nation more than $2,300,000,000 at a time when depression had turned fat surpluses into alarming deficits. It still was felt the President would touch upon their important domestic issue—particularly inasmuch as all advance information points to a majority Legion movement to adopt such a demand—but last-minute developments have been such it was held confidently by most observers that his remarks today would go far beyond any such issues.

One suggestion advanced was that the Hoover Administration might be preparing to pave the way for an international holiday in naval armaments building, in advance of next February's disarmament conference. Such a step already has been hailed in high, responsible sources as a sure relief to overtaxed budgets the world over, and a gesture conducive to ultimate success of the February meeting of the nations. There was no confirmation that this would figure prominently into today's "mystery" address, however.

The President's remarks will be broadcast over a nation-wide hook-up.

Another libel in divorce was filed by Mrs. Anita W. Lederach, of 204 Lawn avenue, Sellersville, against her husband, Mark K. Lederach, on the grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment.

The libelant avers they were married July 7, 1923, in Philadelphia, and that they immediately made their home in Sellersville. She also alleges that her husband has mistreated her since June, 1931.

A re-arrangement of the lighting system and a number of extensions insure those who attend the night fair the opportunity of seeing properly all the exhibits on the grounds. This improvement is made necessary by the increasing popularity of the night fair.

All school children will be admitted free Tuesday. One of the main features for the children will be the hobby show and the Boy Scout exhibit, which will be held in specially prepared booths under the grandstand. This is in addition to the many other educational features.

Wednesday will be American Legion Day with a competitive drum and bugle corps drill in front of the grandstand. Army, Navy and Marine Corps officials will be the judges. Present indications point to keen competition for the prize awards. In case of rain the event will be held Friday.

financial markets have become demoralized and have been liquidating their sterling assets regardless of their intrinsic worth. In the circumstances there was no alternative but to protect the financial position of this country by the only means at our disposal.

"His Majesty's Government are securing a balanced budget and the internal position of this country is sound. This position must be maintained. It is one thing to go off the gold standard with an unbalanced budget and uncontrolled inflation; it is quite another thing to take this measure, not because of internal financial difficulties, but because of excessive withdrawals of borrowed capitals.

"The ultimate resources of this country are enormous and there is no doubt that the present exchange difficulties will prove only temporary."

Vitamin-D Bread Delivered by Messenger

An army of messenger boys completed last week the task of delivering several thousand loaves of bread containing sunshine Vitamin-D, to doctors, dentists, nurses and matrons of schools and hospitals, in Philadelphia and the adjacent territory, it was revealed by Walter Zearfaus, manager of the General Baking Company, at Rising Sun and Godfrey avenues, Philadelphia, Pa.

"Getting sunshine health now made possible through this new improvement in our leading brand of bread, is the latest miracle of modern science," said Mr. Zearfaus. "Through the perfection of a process by which Vitamin-D, the sunshine vitamin and hitherto the rarest and most difficult to obtain of all known vitamins is baked into an ordinary loaf of bread, anyone can now get an adequate uniform supply of this vital element with his regular meals. No other table food supplies this amount. The necessity for such a daily supply, because most of us do not get all the real sunshine our bodies require led to the discovery of this new process acclaimed by scientists and food authorities as perhaps the greatest development in modern baking."

The Paediatric Research Foundation, a group of University of Toronto scientists working on nutritional problems, developed the process for applying Vitamin-D to bread, and the General Baking Company was recently licensed under the Steenbock patents to make it generally available to the public, Mr. Zearfaus said. The basic patents to make it generally available are owned by the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation of the University of Wisconsin.

According to the Paediatric Research Foundation and the foremost nutritional scientists with whom they have collaborated in this country and Canada, Vitamin-D is as scarce as its valuable, Mr. Zearfaus emphasized, adds sound tooth and bone construction and that the human system is better able to resist diseases when it has a regular adequate intake of Vitamin D.

The importance of Vitamin-D was first demonstrated at John Hopkins University in 1922 by Dr. E. V. McCollum, Mr. Zearfaus said further. Since, then, he continued, it has been determined that under modern living conditions, the human race definitely lacks this element. "Vitamin-D is called the sunshine vitamin because its main source is exposure to the rays of the sun," he explained. "There are present in the skin, minute quantities of a substance called ergosterol. The ultra-violet rays of the sun act upon this substance and produce Vitamin-D. The average individual here and elsewhere in the United States, however, obtains a sufficient supply of Vitamin-D in this manner only in the summer time and then only by remaining in the sunshine for an hour or two a day, between ten in the morning and two in the afternoon. Moreover, the supply of Vitamin-D derived from the sun is further restricted by the smoke and dust of the average city air and the clothing people wear.

One or two slices of the sunshine vitamin D bread at each meal, will Paediatric Research Foundation will supply all the extra daily Vitamin-D requirements of the average individual according to the highest scientific authorities, Mr. Zearfaus said.

No change in the taste or appearance of the bread is involved and faus emphasized, calling especial attention to the fact that the product carries the seal of approval of the American Medical Association. The vitamin D bread at each meal, will Paediatric Research Foundation will test loaves weekly from the local bakery, to see that the full vitamin content is uniformly maintained. A small royalty on each loaf will be paid under the terms of the contract, aggregating he estimated hundreds of thousands of dollars per year, and as the two beneficiaries, Wisconsin and Toronto are both non-profit institutions these profits will be devoted to child welfare and further nutritional research throughout the country.

Who Stole The CZARINA'S RUBIES ?

A treasure of precious stones that would dazzle an Eastern potentate is mysteriously stolen just as it is about to be restored to its rightful owner. The circumstances of that theft and the trail of kidnapping, jealousy, murder and mystery left behind form the strangest yarn yet spun about any of those famous Crown Jewels of old Russia, which have gone curious paths since the Revolution.
